

“I really honestly don't know what I would have done these last horrible four months without you. I would not be here. I mean literally. I think the world needs to know about what you all do. Thank you for saving my life.”

Would you give up your bed for Nikki?

These people did....

“It was a great event and for a great cause. Without a shadow of a doubt the best part of the whole exercise was raising funds to help those that are unfortunate not to have the privileges that we so often take for granted. Thanks to the Cardinal Hume Centre for all that you are consistently doing to shed a little light in what can often be a dark dark world!”

*Tunde Adegbemile,
Director at DTZ*

“Taking part in the CEO Sleepout gave me a very small glimpse of what homeless people go through each night. Knowing that the money raised would mean that the Cardinal Hume Centre can help more people made it all worth it.”

“It was a fantastic event, held in a unique venue. I met some great people and enjoyed the tour of the grounds. Most importantly I knew that all the money I had raised would go to help people facing homelessness. I would encourage anyone to take part in the CEO Sleepout. It’s not a comfortable night but it is a meaningful one.”

*Martha Clarke,
Director at Mindful, Communications and Coaching*

“Although sleeping out for one night does not compare to what these young people face every day, I thought it was important in highlighting the issue of homelessness and of course raising funds for the Centre’s work”

*Philip Marsden,
Chairman of Ridgeway Partners*

“It is a great opportunity to get business leaders together to take part in an exciting event to raise money for and highlight the very serious problem of homelessness and poverty in the UK.”

*Cathy Corcoran,
CEO Cardinal Hume Centre*
